Perched nearly 1,000 feet above the Town of Jackson on East Gros Ventre Butte, Spring Creek Ranch offers incomparable views of the Teton and Snake River ranges and Spring Gulch.

Once a part of the ranch operated by former Wyoming Governor and Senator Cliff Hansen, Spring Creek Ranch today is a popular resort community that provides a real sense of getting away from it all in Western style. It's a testament to the beauty of the location that Aman Resorts chose it for the company's first property in North America, the Amangani.

Jackson, Teton Village and skiing at the Jackson Hole Mountain Resort are all within a quick drive from Spring Creek Ranch. But there are a variety of on-site resort activities to enjoy. The resort offers concierge services to homeowners, as well as tennis, swimming and a full-service spa. The activity that sets it apart from other resorts in the area is horseback riding, which is geared to people of all skill levels and ages. And with nearly 700 out of the property's 1,000 acres preserved as open space, Spring Creek is a lovely place to hike and look for wildlife. The Granary restaurant is popular with locals as well as out-of-towners, as is the restaurant's lounge, which offers jazz and piano music on some nights.

Spring Creek Ranch is one of the favorite view-oriented developments in the valley where short-term rentals are permitted, which makes it highly desirable for investment property.
